6 Red China Divisions Reported In Korea as War Outlook Shifts; Allies Hold Against New Attacks

Force of Million Reported Within Striking Range

SEOUL, Korea, Nov. 4.—An American spokesman of the Korean military advisory group said tonight at 8th Army headquarters that the South Korean army estimated six Chinese Communist divisions have entered Korea to oppose the Allies.

This spokesman said the South Korean army estimated at least 75,000 Chinese Communist soldiers had entered Korea to oppose the Allies.

dieters already were committed to the Korean war.

This statement followed American Army official estimates that three Chinese Red divisions or their numerical equivalents were fighting in Korea.

A United States 8th Army spokesman said two Chinese divisions or their equivalents were fighting in Northwest Korea, while a United States Marine spokesman said a full Chinese division was identified in action in Northeast Korea.

The Marine spokesman said the Chinese Reds were fighting around the Changjin (Coshin) reservoir. The reservoir is 35 miles north-west of the big industrial city of Hamhung.

Driving Toward Power Dam.

The Marine spokesman said the division was composed of Chinese Communist 370th, 371st and 372d Regiments.

He said Manchurian veterans of the 371st were battling the Leatherneck advance toward the power dam.

More Red Chinese in Korea Than First Thought, Britain Says

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Foreign Office said today more Chinese Communist troops seem to be engaged in the Korean war than Britain first believed.

A spokesman announced today Britain is discussing reports of Red Chinese intervention with its American, French and other allies.

Informed sources said while no action has been taken yet, an early British move is "possible." Britain is the only major Western power which has recognized the Chinese Communist government.

dam, one of two serving both North Korea and Manchuria.

The victory that had seemed so simple last month had changed complexion. One high-ranking 8th Army officer said the Reds probably have 300,000 troops deployed along the Korean-Manchurian border.

However, Allied forces forged a firm line which stood unbroken in the face of renewed Red attacks.

The Army spokesman said the Chinese Reds may have 1 million or more troops within "committing distance," meaning they could strike from their present locations.

However, intelligence officers said there still was no determination.

Shifting Winds to Bring Fall Weather to Area

Shifting winds will bring real autumn to Washington late today, tonight and tomorrow, the Weather Bureau promised today.

Ending a week of summer weather, showers moved into the area early to drop temperatures below the over-normal figures. The high yesterday was 77 degrees but it was still short of a record.

The forecast calls for winds shifting to the northwest late today and tonight and bringing in cooler air. Expected high today was in the low 70s; the low tonight about 44.

The prediction for tomorrow is rather cloudy, windy and colder with a high in the 50s.

Unseasonal weather continued in the West as winds from the Mojave desert blew a November heat wave into Los Angeles, along with sand and dust. Los Angeles had 92 yesterday and the temperature went to 94 at Pasadena.

In contrast, Big Piney, Wyo., had 5 degrees, and rain and snow extended from eastern Nebraska and southwestern Iowa into Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri. Freezing weather was predicted for most of the Midwest, from belt tonight.

Small craft warnings went up along the Florida-Georgia-North Carolina coast.

Red Chinese Propaganda Blast Sounds Like Overture to War

Western Outposts Like Hong Kong Fear Isolation

By Fred Hampson

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

HONG KONG, Nov. 4.—The Chinese Communists have opened the floodgates of propaganda and the ensuing roar sounds as if they intend full-scale intervention in Korea.

Already the growing evidence that the Chinese have entered the Korean war to a limited extent is causing uneasiness in non-Communist areas of this part of Asia.

The feeling in this British crown colony on the edge of Red China is that the world is only a narrow step away from a third great war.

And such a war would bring the heavy force of Communist arms to bear against such small, non-Communist holdout areas as this. The prevailing opinion here still is that the Chinese Communists

U. N. Ready to Revoke Four-Year Ban on Envoys to Spain

Expected to Let Nation Join Affiliated Groups, But Not Main Body

BULLETIN

NEW YORK (P).—The United Nations Assembly today cleared the way for U. N. members to send ambassadors back to Madrid and for Spain to join U. N. specialized agencies. The vote was 38 to 10.

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The United Nations is expected to revoke its four-year ban on sending ambassadors to Franco Spain today.

The 60-Nation General Assembly also is expected to grant Spain the right to join organizations affiliated with the U. N., but not to join the world body itself.

The Assembly moved toward early action on the question after refusing to debate it. Thirty-three delegates voted against debate and only five—the Soviet bloc—voted for it.

Julius Katz-Suchy, Poland, attacked the vote as evidence of "indecent haste."

Although the United States is supporting the move to lower the barriers raised against Spain in 1946, President Truman made it clear at his press conference Thursday that it would be a long time before he sends an American Ambassador to Madrid.

Not Approval of Regime.

The United States position is that the U. N.'s anti-Franco resolution has failed to accomplish any worthwhile aim and is just an irritation to those countries—chiefly in Latin America—which have sentimental ties with Spain.

Senator Sparkman, Democrat of Alabama, a delegate to the General Assembly, said during debate on the issue that American support for repeal of the ban in no way indicates United States approval of the Franco regime.

It is understood that the United States insisted the resolution—sponsored by Bolivia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, the Philippines and Peru—be worded in such a way as to make this perfectly clear before pledging its support.

Indonesia Takes Amboina, Says Revolt Is Over

Rebels' Loss of Capital Ends Five-Month Civil War, Jakarta Reports

By the Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Nov. 4.—Capture of the town of Amboina, capital of the rebel South Moluccan republic, was announced by the Government today.

Vice Defense Minister Ali Boedjardjo said it meant the end of months-long resistance by South Moluccan troops.

The fall of Amboina, he declared, "is tantamount to complete capitulation of the rebel forces" who proclaimed their independence April 26.

The capital, located on the island of Amboina where Indonesian troops made an amphibious landing September 28, fell Friday noon.

Invasion in September.

Amboina Island is one of the Moluccas, between the Celebes and New Guinea, where last spring rebels proclaimed a republic independent of Indonesian federal control.

Central government forces invaded the key rebel island September 28. Since then Radio Amboina broadcast frequent appeals for Red Cross aid and for intervention by the United Nations.

A U. N. commission in Indonesia last month urged that military operations be halted and offered its good offices for a peaceful settlement.

Indonesia rejected these overtures October 10, contending that the Amboina issue was a domestic one and beyond U. N. jurisdiction.

Dutch Blasted.

The Jakarta government's view is that the rebellion was brought on by failure of the Dutch to maintain discipline over native Ambonese troops of the former Netherlands East Indies army after granting Indonesia her independence. These troops formed the core of the rebellion.

The government has told the United Nations that it intends to give the South Moluccans an "appropriate measure of autonomy" when the fighting stops.

Whether the fall of Amboina town means an imminent end to Ambonese opposition remained to be seen.

The government was reported October 30 to have rushed at least three more battalions to the island to re-enforce the six battalions already there. The rebel strength has been about one battalion.

Guerrilla Fighting Possible.

The Jakarta announcement on Amboina quoted a communication from the East Indonesian territorial commandant, Col. Kawilarang, that the red-white Ambonese flag had been flying over Amboina town since 12:15 p.m. yesterday (10:15 p.m. EST Thursday).

While capture of the capital may have sealed the military fate of the South Moluccan republic, neutral observers speculated that Ambonese troops might carry on guerrilla warfare in the mountains.

Maryland and GWU Will Renew Rivalry On Gridiron Today

Terps Heavy Favorites; Bad Weather May Cut Attendance to 10,000

By Merrell Whittlesey

Maryland's ground attack, despite a new boss at the controls, was favored to produce more touchdowns than George Washington's aerial barrage in the third renewal of the modern Terp-Colonial grid rivalry today at College Park. Game time is 2 o'clock.

Rain was expected to have an adverse effect on both the attendance and the teams' offensive maneuvers. With fair weather, a turnout of more than 20,000 was expected, but rain could cut the figure in half.

Maryland crushed its Southern Conference protege, 47-0, two years ago and last year won 40-14, after scoring 26 points in the second period, but today's score figures to be closer.

The over-all Maryland-GWU series now stands at 6-3 for the Terps, with two scoreless ties, but nine of the 11 games were played before 1911. The schools did not meet for 37 years in football prior to 1948.

Maryland Heavy Favorite.

On its winning performances against Navy, Michigan State, and Duke, Maryland rates a several-touchdown choice today. But if the Terps play as they did in losing to Georgia and North Carolina State, or even in their squeeze triumph over Georgetown, the Colonials could make it mighty close.

After losing to Virginia, George Washington rebounded to win three straight Conference clashes. The Colonials then were three touchdowns underdogs against Wake Forest and two against South Carolina, but performed creditably before losing 13-0 and 34-20, respectively to teams that appear capable of playing Maryland even.

Maryland's flashy split-T attack will be in the hands of Bob De Stefano today, with assistance from Frank Armworthy, Johnny Seabath, the clever sophomore quarterback from Baltimore, suffered a shoulder separation in

Impellitteri Candidacy May Aid Republicans in New York State

Revolt Against Tammany Gaining Supporters; Hanley Mudslinging Appears to Be Overdone

By Gould Lincoln

Star Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The big break for the Republicans in the political campaign here is the independent candidacy of Vincent Impellitteri for Mayor of New York City. That candidacy's support by thousands of New Yorkers looks like another of the periodical revolts against Tammany Hall and reported racketeering, graft and police corruption.

If this revolt is strong enough, it may carry with it danger for the entire Democratic State ticket, including the party's candidate for Governor, Representative Walter A. Lynch, and cut into the strength of Senator Lehman. In the first place, the Democratic bosses and those of the Liberal Party put forward a weak State ticket. From Governor on down the line, the candidates have had little or no administrative experience. They are up against a list of Republican candidates, headed by Gov. Dewey, who are not only experienced but for eight years have given the State an excellent and progressive administration. That means something to the voters of New York.

Had it not been for the now-celebrated Hanley letter and the chance it gave Mr. Lynch and the Democratic campaigners to charge that Gov. Dewey had "bought" his draft nomination for re-election, the campaign might have been merely an attempt by a weak outfit to get into power, with no real issues to raise. The Hanley letter, however, gave an opportunity for a great mudslinging campaign.

This mudslinging, however, has

Authorities Seeking Puerto Ricans Jailed With Albizu in 1937

Eight Are Described As Dangerous Fanatics, Leading Nationalists

Federal agents investigating the attempted assassination of President Truman are checking the whereabouts of a small group of high-ranking Puerto Rican nationalists who served prison sentences in this country with Pedro Albizu Campos, Nationalist Party chief, The Star learned today.

Albizu and eight other revolutionary extremists were in the Puerto Rican Troops Called Off Streets as Vote Registration Begins, Page A-3

Federal prison at Atlanta for terms ranging from four to six years between 1937 and 1943. Prison authorities regarded them as among the most fanatical and potentially dangerous inmates ever held there.

It was Albizu who wrote two letters found in the pocket of Griselto Torresola, shot down by a presidential guard in Wednesday's Blair House shooting. The security officers are particularly interested in the whereabouts of the eight men because they are among the few other Puerto Ricans who may be in the country with whom Albizu is known to have had direct contact.

Convicted of Sedition.

According to Federal Bureau of Prison records, those sent to prison in 1937 with Albizu after convictions on charges of sedition and inciting a riot in Puerto Rico were: Juan Antonio Corretjer, Luis S. Valazquez, Julio H. Valazquez, Clemente Soto Velaz, Irasmo Valazquez, Juan Callarado Santiago, Pablo Rosado Ortiz and Ralph Ortiz Patecho. Luis Valazquez got six years, Corretjer five and the others four years each. Albizu also got six years. They all served full sentences and were not paroled.

Former officials at the prison recalled today that the men, while causing no trouble such as a riot or attempted break, required unusual watching because of their outspoken bitterness against the United States.

Albizu, a Harvard graduate, was assigned to the prison school to

President Pays Final Tribute to Slain Policeman

Attends Last Rites At Fort Myer Before Leaving for St. Louis

His face etched with sorrow, President Truman today paid his respects to the White House policeman who gave his life in Mr. Truman's defense.

The President and Mrs. Truman sat near the front of Fort Myer

Chapel during services for Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, the 40-year-old guard slain during Wednesday's gun fight in front of Blair House.

Extraordinary security measures marked the event. The Trumans rode to Arlington Cemetery in a black limousine, followed by an open car carrying nine Secret Service men.

Route Is Guarded.

The route was protected by policemen and soldiers with fixed bayonets.

At the chapel, honor guards of Metropolitan and Park police formed in the area, as well as the American Legion national honor guard and the Army band.

Dressed in a dark blue suit and grey hat, Mr. Truman solemnly walked into the flower-filled chapel with Mrs. Truman. She wore a black suit.

Outside, the band played "Nearer My God to Thee" as the flag-draped casket was brought into the chapel by two soldiers and six White House policemen acting as pallbearers.

Dean Suter Officiates.

Dean John W. Suter of Washington Cathedral, assisted by Lt. Col. Robert M. Homiston, Fort Myer chaplain, said several prayers during the simple services. He prayed for the slain policeman and offered a prayer for Mr. Truman, for his health and for his direction.

Mr. Truman's grief was noticeable to all as he and Mrs. Truman left the chapel and drove a few hundred yards to the grave for the committal services.

Pvt. Coffelt's widow was supported by a brother who is an Army sergeant and a White House secretary who is a personal friend.

Coffin Bears Coffin.

The coffin was borne to the grave by a caisson drawn by six white horses. Secret Service men flanked the grave from all sides, keeping the crowd at a distance.

Masonic services were held at the grave, after which a squad of soldiers fired three volleys. The casket was lowered as a bugler blew "Taps."

The FBI and Secret Service, meanwhile, continued to investigate the Blair House shooting in the belief that there were conspirators in addition to the two Puerto Ricans who shot it out with five policemen and Secret Service men in a losing gamble to kill the President.

The body of Griselto Torresola, the Puerto Rican slain in the assassination attempt, remained unclaimed at the morgue.

Undertaker Seeks Body.

Bernard Danzasky, a Washington funeral director, said he had a telephone call from a Brooklyn undertaker, identified only as Hernandez, requesting that the remains be sent to New York.

However, the body must be formally identified before it is removed.

Puerto Rico Circulars Distributed in St. Louis

By the Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4.—Mimeographed circulars urging Puerto Rican independence were distributed today in St. Louis, where President Truman is due to arrive late today.

Police ordered the arrest of any person found distributing them. Two Puerto Rican revolutionists attempted to assassinate the President in Washington Wednesday.

Only a few of the circulars had been found. Several of them were left at an entrance to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Building. The 140-word circulars stated Puerto Rican people "are enslaved by Wall Street imperialism." They made only one reference to President Truman, saying he could veto Puerto Rican laws at any time.
